Lowest Performing Schools in Georgia (see attached list) Note: Current List

The Governor's office on Education produced a list of the lowest performing schools in the state. The lowest 25% is called out in a house bill on school choice. The list determines which students are eligible for the Promise Schools voucher program, which will give up to $6,500 to families to pay for private school tuition or home-school expenses. Gov. Brian Kemp signed the voucher bill into law earlier this year. We have received several calls regarding students who wish to transfer.

Random Search (Status)

Currently on Hold:

Legal Advisory: Currently the American Civil Liberties Union (ACLU) is reviewing several schools with similar policies. No legal tests have run in Georgia. “Question- Does the current state of violence in public schools raise the level of concern to a search without cause status? Litigation may soon follow. Metal detectors have stood and passed this question. Random searches have not.

Update: Coweta County schools did a random check of several schools in their system. Lockers, classrooms, backpacks and students were searched. This was the result of numerous (3 of record) drug overdose situations during the month of November.

Several schools throughout the country are currently in legal actions with parents over random searches. More specific results and legal opinions should be coming out soon.
